

Bruce Durie is one of Scotland's top genealogists. Perhaps best known for his eight-year BBC radio series “Digging Up Your Roots” and “A House with A Past,” he has also authored over 30 books, including the best-selling Scottish Genealogy, now in its 4th edition. Bruce founded and headed a postgraduate genealogy program at the University of Strathclyde, Glasgow and has also developed a full-time, online, one-year masters program in genealogical studies. He teaches courses in genealogy, documents and heraldry at the University of Edinburgh and serves on the boards of scholarly genealogy journals. His background is in medicine and neuropharmacology, and he also holds a doctoral degree in history and education.

Bruce is Shennachie (Genealogist and Historian) to the Chief of Durie, and official Shennachie to the Council of Scottish Clans and Associations.
